With big pharmaceutical companies in Germany such as Bayer and Boehringer Ingelheim, Germany is a hub for research and production for the pharma industry. Beyond that, work as a pharmacist in local pharmacies is a well respected and highly regarded profession. This high recognition of the profession creates good opportunities to study this subject in Germany.

There are slightly more than a handful of English-language Master's programs in Pharmacy at German universities, but they still offer a broad and interesting variety of specializations: You may for example study the marketing side of pharmaceutical products, industrial pharmacy or the medical, chemical, and biotechnological side of this topic.
